The Minor

The minor in Peace and Justice Studies is an integrated, multi-disciplinary program, consisting of 18 units, divided among a lower division prerequisite (3 units), upper division distribution requirements (12 units), and a capstone seminar (3 units). Students are required to meet with the Program Coordinator to plan a program of study for the minor.

Lower Division Distribution Requirement

All students are required to take Introduction to Peace and Justice Studies (PJS 101) to complete the Peace and Justice Minor. PJS101 provides historical and contemporary perspectives on the nature of conflict, the conditions of sustainable development, and strategies for global order. Students will explore the linkages among these issues as a means for understanding the obstacles to and opportunities for peace and justice. Depending on the home department of the faculty member teaching this course, PJS 101 is cross-listed as a course within that department. For example, if the faculty member teaching PJS 101 is from the History Department, PJS 101 will be cross listed as History 116 (War and Peace in the Modern Age). PJS 101 can be applied to your GE, major and minor requirements. For example if you are a History major and a Peace and Justice Studies minor, taking History 116 will fulfill your 3 unit History GE requirement, 3 units of your History major lower division requirement, and your 3 unit lower division Peace and Justice Studies requirement. PJS 101 is taught every fall semester by faculty from departments such as: History, Political Science, and Theology and Religious Studies. Courses that may be substituted for PJS101 include History 116 (War and Peace in the Modern Age), Political Science 120 (International Politics), Religious Studies 112 (World Religions), English 228 (Literature in Violent Times) or Theatre Studies 111 (Theatre and Society).

Upper Division Distribution Requirements

Students may satisfy the upper division distribution requirements by completing a thematic (conflict resolution, development and sustainability, international relations, or domestic justice) OR regional (Asia, Europe, Latin America, Middle East and Africa, or North America) focus. Students may select a maximum of two courses from any single discipline in either focus. Upper division courses in the PJS minor may not be double counted in other majors and minors although they can be counted for both the PJS minor and upper division GE requirements. Honors courses or Special Topics courses not listed may count toward the minor but such courses must be approved by the Program Coordinator.

Thematic Focus: If choosing a thematic focus, select four courses from one of the following themes (no more than two courses from any single discipline).

Capstone Requirement

All students are required to enroll in Peace and Justice Studies 495 (3 units) offered every other spring semester. As a capstone course, PJS 495 integrates the knowledge and skills students have acquired through coursework and experience. The course also provides a foundation for possible future engagement with peace and justice concerns through graduate work, career choice, or volunteer activities. Under the supervision of the course instructor, students will develop a research project or paper. Completed projects will become part of a student archive designed to provide guidance and inspiration for future students of peace and justice.
